“THERE’S A SIMPLICITY TO IT,” DESIGNER ERIC DYER SAYS. “THE DESIGN CLEVERLY CONCEDES TO INDIVIDUAL CHARACTER THAT ALLOWS THE OWNER TO BE THE STAR WHILE EVERYTHING ELSE PLAYS A SUPPORTING ROLE.”

A RARE OCEANFRONT BUILDING DESIGNED BY ARCHITECT Bernardo Fort Brescia, the Regalia is the first condominium just outside of Golden Beach in Sunny Isles, Fla., giving it a coveted unobstructed view with nothing but single family homes for acres along the shore of the Atlantic Ocean. With striking contemporary architecture and interesting lines that mimic the waves beyond, the structure’s curvilinear form appears as though the wind has shaped it.

In keeping with a high level of luxury, the developers set out to wrap this 5,010-square-foot model apartment in simplistic elegance. Enter designer Eric Dyer with his purist style of design and top-shelf outfitting — a perfect fit for the Regalia. And when it comes to design, Dyer and business partner Troy Dean Ippolito handle everything from architecture and interior construction, to any design need imaginable at their expansive state-of-the-art studio and millwork division.

True to Dyer’s signature stamp, this Regalia residence has an effortless look with a design scheme that truly flows. Using clean lines, sculptural elements and high-quality pieces from the likes of Arthur Collection, Armani/Casa, Fendi and Christian Liaigre, the designer creates a space with a personality all its own.

When the private elevator entry doors open, stunning 360-degree views of the ocean and Intracoastal Waterway catch the eye as panoramic vistas circle the open floor plan and uncluttered interior scheme. The classic color palette is consistent throughout in light cream tones, and dark brown and black accents with touches of gray. In each room, Dyer intentionally creates a layered effect, starting with the light flooring, a dark area rug and light furnishings to give a rich and sophisticated look.

A dramatic dining area intrigues with its expansive, black glass-topped dining table and show-stopping leather-clad side chairs fashioned with a savvy buckle detail.

The Arthur Collection's unique low-lying bed from Showroom 23 takes center stage in the master bedroom, where Glass "Glo Ball" lamps by FLOS add to the metallic mystique.

The gorgeous area rug from Switzerland anchors the oceanfront space. Serving as an artistic divider between the dining and living areas, open shelving provides the perfect place to highlight beautiful accessory pieces from Showroom 23.

The family room appears bright and sharp with its silk-covered walls and a deep-seated sofa clad in crisp white cotton detailed with chocolate brown suede piping. A sleek black cocktail table in sandblasted oak with a high-gloss lacquered center provides striking contrast atop a soft-beige, shag area rug. All of the custom woodwork throughout the home is matched to the dark-stained oak cabinetry in the kitchen, where walls of bronze mirror are actually camouflaged storage for air conditioning units. A soothing color palette continues in the master bedroom, where everything from armchairs with suede straps to a channeled velvet screen and a fur throw offer one sensual tactile experience after another. The bed is wrapped in metallic vinyl and sits atop a rich bronze-toned viscose area rug. A ribbon fireplace and soft lighting conjures the warm, romantic feel of a private suite.

With interesting sculptural elements and minimalistic design, this Sunny Isles condo is brimming with style and elegance. A neutral color palette of light creamy hues mixes with contrasting dark warm tones to remain classic and timeless, while rich materials, luxurious furnishings and stunning accessories add just the right touch.
